

The future of SA's growth

NOW in its fourth year, the annual Manufacturing Indaba is fast approaching and with the country heavily focused on economic growth, the impact future trends will have on manufacturing in South Africa is of critical importance.

Hosted at Emperor's Palace from the 27 to 28 June, the indaba attracts key industry leaders, policy makers, academia and potential leaders, and brings them together to explore strategies that are needed to build our manufacturing future.

A key focus area will be growth and how to build a stronger manufacturing sector. In order for South Africa to compete internationally, technology and its effect on manufacturing, across the world and in South Africa, is a major topic. Speakers will showcase manufacturing opportunities for assistance and access to finance for industrial players.

It is without a doubt the leading annual manufacturing event and the networking and knowledge gained will far outweigh any other intervention.
